Why we're here

LOCAL IMPACT

- How can universities and the NHS maximise their collective benefits to society and the economy?

POLICY FRAMEWORKS

- What roles should universities play in Integrated Care Systems?
- What roles should the NHS play in the UK's Research & Development Roadmap?

FUTURE OF NATION

- Ensure that universities and NHS remain central to national conversations around 'levelling up'

Our collaborative story in Newcastle

Working together to improve health, wealth and wellbeing

Prosperity – Supporting jobs, growth and reducing poverty

People – Fostering inclusion and social justice

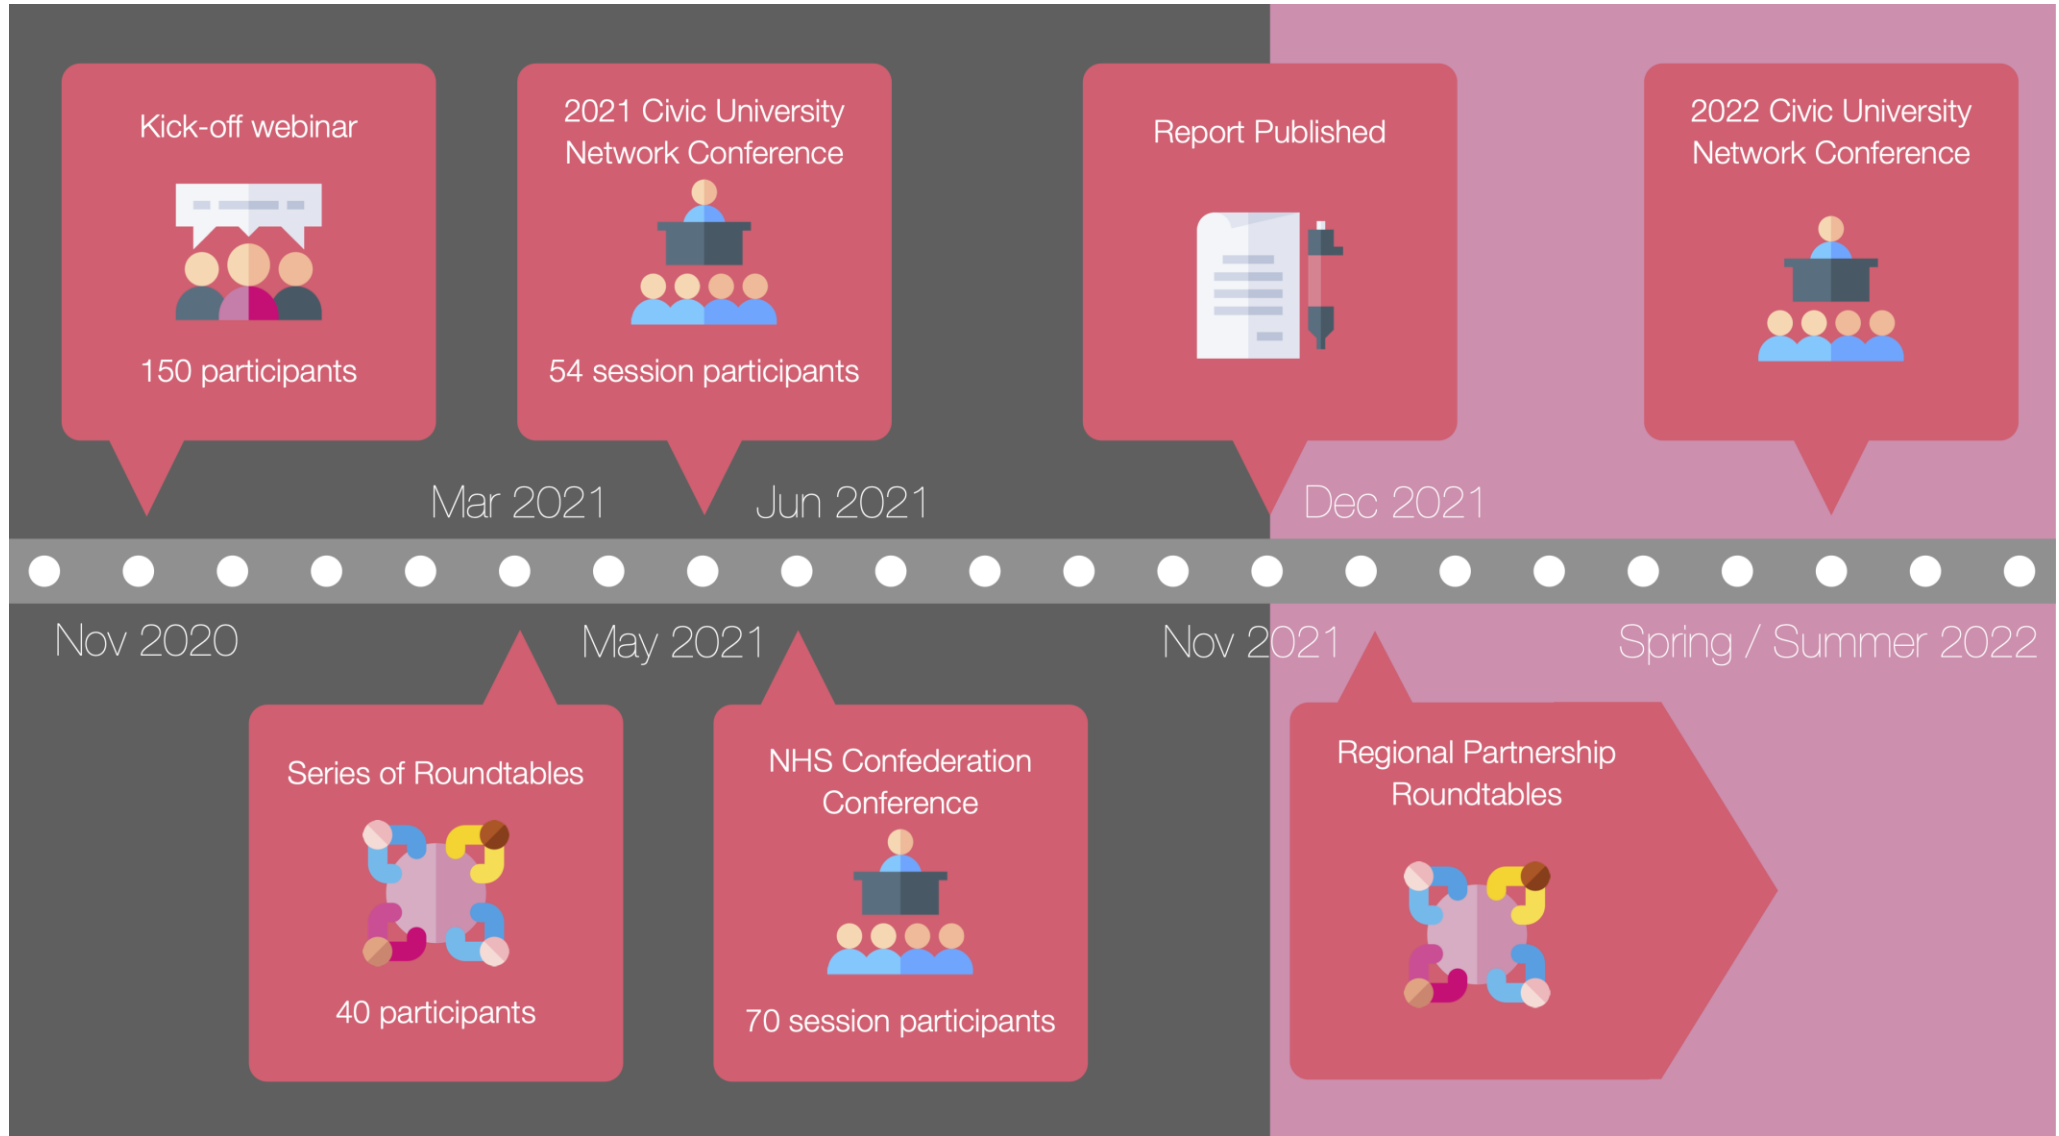

Planet – Engaging in climate change

The journey

A series of conversations

“Often the NHS will approach management consultants, rather than local university, for innovation work. We are not seen as the ‘go-to’ partners. How can we change this?”

"We both matter hugely to the local economy, but don't always present a joint face when talking with our partners."

"The NHS is looking at international recruitment and universities focus on international students – we can't forget local impact, local recruitment and upskilling.

“We need to focus on the long-standing structural inequalities and be humble enough to realise that research on evaluation is more beneficial than producing more evidence on what we already know.”

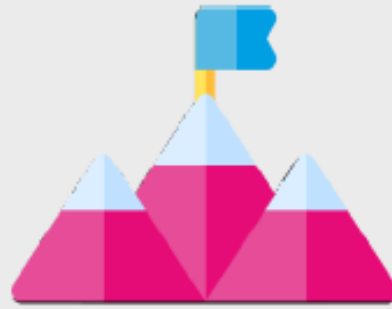

Guiding principles

1: Collaborate & co-develop consistently

2: Recognise our role as part of an anchor network

3: Commit to building the future

4: Prioritise inclusivity

5: Measure impact

Questions to develop your partnership

- Is the higher and further education voice being heard in the development or delivery of your local Integrated Care System? Are their representatives part of the local (e.g.) ICS Partnerships Board?
- Are there opportunities for experts within your organisation to provide advice to others within your local area, helping to guide policy decisions?
- Have we actively shaped the local strategic economic priorities with evidence-based data?
- How involved is primary care in your local NHS-university relationship?
- Does your organisation share data, or have a data-sharing agreement with your local university, NHS Trust, or council?

In conversation with...

Professor Chris Day - Vice Chancellor and President, Newcastle University

Dame Jackie Daniel - CEO, Newcastle-upon-Tyne Hospitals NHS Foundation Trust

Matthew Taylor - CEO, NHS Confederation

Professor Steve West CBE - Vice Chancellor, President and CEO UWE (Bristol) and President, UUK

Moving forward from here

- Please test the questions with your local leaders
- Are you interested in hosting a regional roundtable?
- Please share your experiences, learnings or examples of best practice with the Civic University Network team

Thank you
